John Mortimer : Naked Justice (Oberon Modern Plays) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Naked Justice (Oberon Modern Plays):

Three strange people, two men and a woman, arrive in a house where they are obviously expected. Who are they?

They talk about crime. Are they criminals? The woman talks a lot about sex, what dubious business is she in? A play about the act of judging: can it be separated from the character and past of who sits in judgement? Naked Justice toured the UK in 2001.

About the Author John Mortimer was born in 1923 in London. A barrister, playwright, novelist and raconteur - he is best known for his 'Rumpole of the Bailey' stories. He is also the author of numerous film scripts including Cider with Rosie and Zeffirelli's Tea with Mussolini. His best known play is the autobiographical 'A Voyage round my Father', which was televised in 1982, with Laurence Olivier as the father, now published by Oberon to coincide with a production at the Donmar Theatre.
