Barbara Novak : Nature and Culture: American Landscape and Painting, 1825-1875, With a New Preface
before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Nature and Culture:
American Landscape and Painting, 1825-1875, With a New Preface:

the landscape painters within the influences of their artistic, literary, philosophic, religious, national, and economic culture is successfully done. Ms. Novak does an admirable job of bringing their world "to life". There is a "price" to be paid, however. Nature and Culture is not an easy read. Some of the terminology employed by Ms. Novak does not exist in any of the three dictionaries I own; for several passages it was necessary to engage in google searches to ascertain what it was she was discussing. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Needed for class By Jessica Nelson I bought it on my kindle and it is very handy to have there for me. I don't have any complaints. This book is for someone who likes the art world and learning about how artists learned and discovered how to create these amazing works of art. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By Robert Rudawsky I enjoy studying the biography of the Hudson River School artists and this book is virtually indispensable.

In this richly illustrated volume, featuring more than fifty black-and-white illustrations and a beautiful eight-page color insert, Barbara Novak describes how for fifty extraordinary years, American society drew from the idea of Nature its most cherished ideals. Between 1825 and 1875, all kinds of Americans--artists, writers, scientists, as well as everyday citizens--believed that God in Nature could resolve human contradictions, and that nature itself confirmed the American destiny. Using diaries and letters of the artists as well as quotes from literary texts, journals, and periodicals, Novak illuminates the range of ideas projected onto the American landscape by painters such as Thomas Cole, Albert Bierstadt, Frederic Edwin Church, Asher B. Durand, Fitz H. Lane, and Martin J. Heade, and writers such as Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry David Thoreau, and Frederich Wilhelm von Schelling. Now with a new preface, this spectacular volume captures a vast cultural panorama. It beautifully demonstrates how the idea of nature served, not only as a vehicle for artistic creation, but as its ideal form. "An impressive achievement." --Barbara Rose, The New York Times Book Review "An admirable blend of ambition, elan, and hard research. Not just an art book, it bears on some of the deepest fantasies of American culture as a whole." --Robert Hughes, Time Magazine

...test[s] the the accepted perimeters of art history TLS "Nature and Culture is more than a study of landscape painting: it is the story of the American imagination finding what will suffice. Wonderful is the only adequate word for Novak's "reading" of American painting. Like the opening of the new American Wing at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Nature and Culture is an important event. Miss Novak herself has some of the sublimity of the landscapes she analyzes. Her book is awesomely good."--Anatole Broyard, The New York Times "A model of its kind, a thoroughly engrossing study of the intersection of history and esthetics."--James R. Mellow, Art News "An admirable blend of ambition, elan and hard research. Novak is not one of that vanishing line of critics who tend to treat the history of art simply as the history of pictorial form. Instead, she disentangles and shows the content behind the forms: the iconography that links painting to the culture of its time. Hers is not just an art book, it bears on some of the deepest fantasies of American culture as a whole."--Robert Hughes, Time Hers is not just an art book, it bears on some of the deepest fantasies of American culture as a whole."--Robert Hughes, Time About the Author Barbara Novak is Helen Goodhart Altschul Professor of Art History Emerita at Barnard College and Columbia University. She is the acclaimed author of American Painting of the Nineteenth Century ("surely the best book ever written on the subject"-Hilton Kramer, The New York Times Book ) and Nature and Culture ("awesomely good"-Anatole Broyard, The New York Times). She has been a Commissioner of the Smithsonian's National Portrait Gallery for the last twenty-five years.
