Robert Home : Of Planting and Planning: The making of British colonial cities (Planning, History and Environment Series) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Of Planting and Planning: The making of British colonial cities (Planning, History and Environment Series):

Isquo;At the centre of the world-economy, one always finds an exceptional state, strong, aggressive and privileged, dynamic, simultaneously feared and admired.rsquo; - Fernand Braudel, Civilization and Capitalism, 15thndash;18th

Centuries This, surely, is an apt description of the British Empire at its zenith. Of Planting and Planning explores how Britain used the formation of towns and cities as an instrument of colonial expansion and control throughout the Empire. Beginning with the seventeenth-century plantation of Ulster and ending with decolonization after the Second World War, Robert Home reveals how the British Empire gave rise to many of the biggest cities in the world and how colonial policy and planning had a profound impact on the form and functioning of those cities. This second edition retains the thematic, chronological and interdisciplinary approach of the first, each chapter identifying a key element of colonial town planning. New material and illustrations have been added, incorporating the author's further research since the first edition. Most importantly, Of Planting and Planning remains the only book to cover the whole sweep of British colonial urbanism.

About the Author Robert Home is Professor of Land Management, Anglia Law School, Anglia Ruskin University, UK.
